

Statement of participation

Richard Hill

has passed the free course including all mandatory tests for:

All my own work: exploring academic integrity

This free 6-hour course explored the issues around producing your own work for academic purposes.

Issue date: 26 March 2023

www.open.edu/openlearn

This statement does not imply the award of credit points nor the conferment of a University Qualification. This statement confirms that this free course and all mandatory tests were passed by the learner.

Please go to the course on OpenLearn for full details:

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/education-development/all-my-own-work-exploring-academic-integrity/content-section-overview>

COURSE CODE: AMW_1

All my own work: exploring academic integrity

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/education-development/all-my-own-work-exploring-academic-integrity/content-section-overview>

Course summary

Are you currently studying? This free course, All my own work: exploring academic integrity, is designed to help you build confidence in producing your own work for academic purposes. You will explore what plagiarism is and how to avoid it, and learn how and when to reference. The course also includes an interactive to work through, which will help you to identify the potential temptations and challenges you may face when working on assignments. By the end of the course you should have developed an understanding of what appropriate academic practice is and feel more confident in producing your own work for academic purposes.

Completed study

The learner has completed the following:

Session 1

Session 1: Ethics, trust and academic community: why?

Session 2

Session 2: When and when not to reference

Session 3

Session 3: Exploring the 'how' of producing your own work

End-of-course quiz (score 94%)